

Mobile Arts for Peace Large Grants Scheme

Frequently Asked Question Guide

<https://map.blogs.lincoln.ac.uk/>

1. Can applications be led by PIs from non-Academic organisations, such as NGOs and major in country delivery partners?

Yes. As long as proposals are research-focused and include contributions from research focused partners, applications from PIs based in non-academic organisations are eligible.

Non-academic organisations should provide evidence of their capacity to lead and deliver research projects and attention should be given to issues such as support for the career development of researchers involved in the project and access to appropriate support facilities (e.g. for data management) and advice (e.g. on research ethics, safety etc.).

2. Is there a maximum number of organisations which can be part of a MAP Large Grant application?

There is no limit on the number of applicants on a MAP Large Grant proposal. However, each application will be required to make a case for the applicants which are part of the application. Applicants are required to justify why the partnership between proposed applicants would be strategic and beneficial.

3. Are MAP Large Grant applicants also eligible to be applicants on the MAP small and medium-sized grants?

Yes, MAP will allow large grant applicants to be co-applicants on Small and Medium Grants. Applicants will be required to demonstrate that they have the time and resources which are necessary to work on multiple awards.

4. If an organisation doesn't have the required research capacity, can they still be a co-applicant for a MAP Large Grants application?

Yes. If an organisation doesn't have required research capacity, they can be co-applicant on an application. They will require a main applicant partner which does have the research capacity, e.g. a university.

5. If an organisation doesn't have the required research capacity, and they wish to apply as a main applicant, can they invite external researchers into their organisation in order to demonstrate their capacity as a research institution?

No. Main applicants are required to demonstrate that they have the in-house staff and infrastructure which are required to lead high-quality research programmes. However, organisations without the required research capacity may be co-applicants for the MAP Large Grants.

6. Can MAP Large Grant applications be led by/include current MAP Co-Investigators and their organisations?

Yes. Providing all eligibility criteria are met and they are not members of the core UK team. - MAP Co-Investigators will not be on the assessment panel for judging applicants and awarding grants.

7. If an organisation doesn't have the required research capacity, and they wish to apply as a main applicant, can they invite external researchers into their organisation in order to demonstrate their capacity as a research institution?

No. Main applicants are required to demonstrate that they have the in-house staff and infrastructure which are required to lead high-quality research programmes. However, organisations without the required research capacity may be co-applicants for the MAP Large Grants.